CHILDE!

when you're talking about the design of a steam train, you use "it".

when the steam train is still being built, you use "it".

when the steam train is nearly done, or in for repair, you use "it" or "she".

when the steam train is on the rails, you only use "she".

she breathes, she bellows, she inspires awe and whimsy and joy. she's tall, majestic, and has been dyed several colours in her lifetime.

when she has trouble, everyone is very understanding. a team of people that know her well take her apart, clean her, rearrange her insides, and replace failing pieces.

how unfair that she has everything i've ever wanted. going from an inanimate object to a lady to a well-respected community figure. having an incredible support network and endless adoration.

despite it all, I can't help but love her.

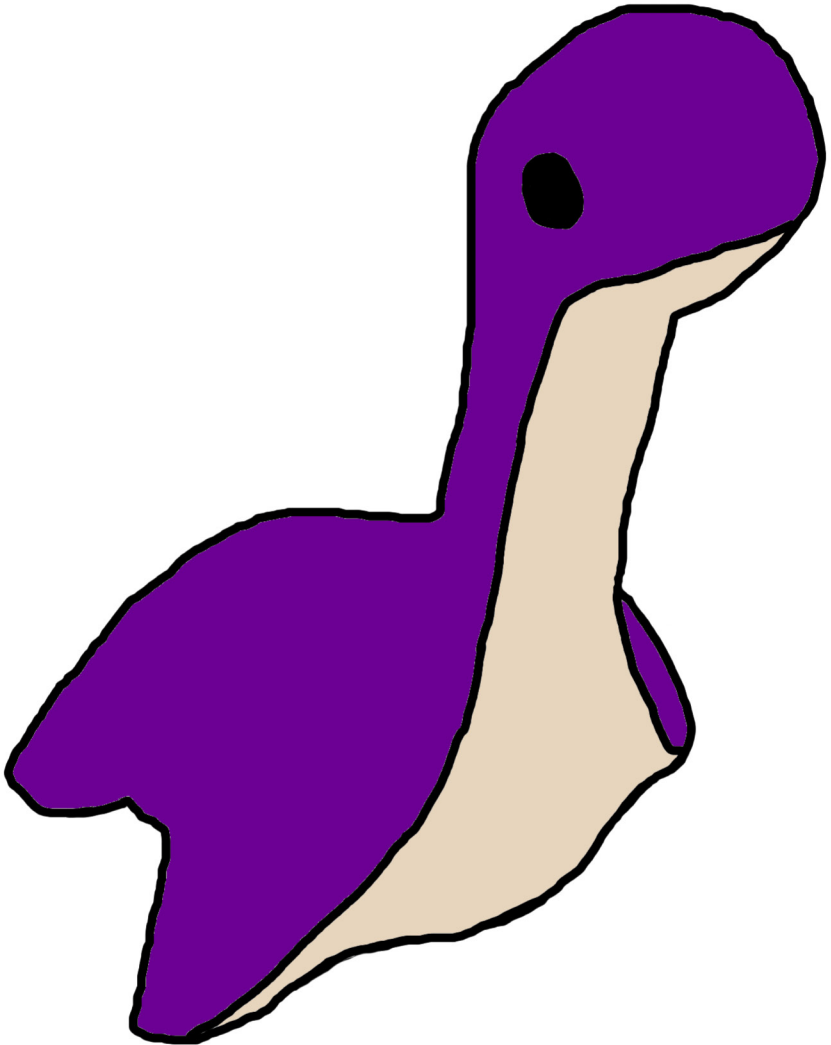

she's 40 years older than me. she's doing better than she ever thought she would. she inspires me. I could never tell her that, though. closing that distance would break my illusion of her. the steam would leave her. sometimes that's all that is keeping me going.

I will stand and watch and wave and silently cling with all my heart.

~~this isn't about steam trains.~~

AN ARTIST'S MANIFESTO

All Or Nothing

"This manifesto is a series of lessons, short stories, and thoughts of mine that reflect who I am as a person, and who I strive to be. It is not meant to be a guide on how to act, but rather I hope people curious enough to find and read this are able to find something they can take away and use in their own life. Read between the lines, see something I didn't intend, and come up with your own interpretations. I will never clarify anything on behalf of you. Only for myself. Whatever the case, I at least hope you'll enjoy what I have written

This manifesto will likely be updated with additions over time. Previously written parts will not be deleted, as to act as a landmark for who I was at a period in time. Addendums or comments may be added." - Intro to 'An Artist's Manifesto'

This segment is a slightly modified version of a speech I gave at the Naarm Trans Day of Resistance on the 22nd of November, 2025

Our existence is non-negotiable. Death before detransition. HRT, over the counter and for free. These are some of the chants that lead our movement of trans liberation. We've been for so so long fighting, and indeed we have gained some ground.

Here in so-called Australia, you can go see a doctor and get prescribed HRT, but it's not universal, and not always easy. Some clinics will have you jump through hoops, sometimes resembling conversation therapy, costing hundreds of dollars, multiple appointments and stress to get prescribed a dose barely fitting the needs of the person taking them, leaving many of us to rely on our amazing community, rather than our lacklustre medical system.

This slogan, All or Nothing, is one we need to take to heart, and believe in all our actions so when we say Cops out of pride we don't just mean pigs out of our spaces, we mean the abolition of the abusive police system as a whole. When we say no pride in prison, we mean the abolition of the broken and horrible prison system as a whole.

When we ask for an end to oppression of all kinds, we ask for the abolition of the abhorrent system of capitalism as a whole. It's All or Nothing, and from where I'm standing, alongside my friends and community, we will not stop fighting until we have every single demand we ask for, no negotiation, no compromise, all or nothing.

It's a philosophy all anarchists and revolutionaries can get behind, it's a philosophy that says that we will never back down until what we've asked for is exactly what we've got. A new system that works is not a system built off the back of one that harms us, so we must fight to strip the current system down until it is no more, and build a new system that is by the people, and works for the people.

The spirit of our strongest chants as mentioned before, that our existence is non-negotiable, death before detransition, HRT over the counter and for free, all carry the weight of the phrase All or Nothing, and we will continue to fight for what we deserve, a future for you, a future for our community, a future for everyone.
